Note #4

Leave Application for Fever

An official written request for a leave of absence for fever is one that an employee submits to their manager or supervisor to let them know that they are ill with a fever and cannot work. The application usually contains information on the employee, including name, address, and contact details; it also usually includes a brief explanation of the sickness, the length of the desired leave, and any other pertinent work-related details like plans for task delegation or handovers. The goal of the leave application is to request permission for time off to maintain professionalism and transparency in the workplace.
